The following members were present: Messrs. Roswell Page, M. T. Eddleton, William Campbell, J. J. Terry, T. C. Lowry, Ed. Taylor, W. S. Wickham and C. D. Clements. Many interesting farming topics were discussed. Local telephone lines and public roads came in for a share of their discussion. The club does not think the roads in Hanover are as good as they should be from the amount of money which is annually spent on them.

The next meeting will be at the hom Mr. M. T. Eddleton. The farmers are backward in their work, but corn, hay and tobacco are looking well.

J. L. Fentress had charged W. L. Fowthe Police Court this morning, when puzzled Justice Taylor and the attorneys. J. L. Fentress had charged W. L. Fowler with carrying concealed weapons, and the case was continued several days for witnesses. This morning it developed that they are business rivals in the sale of cider and vinegar and were formerly in business together. Now they are not together except in the Police Court. Justice Taylor declared that he could not do more than dismissed the case. Then there was a further charge of embezzlement. The gist of this charge is that Fowler collected money and used $53 of it for his own purposes. Fowler admits that, and says he not only accounted for the money, but he was a partner in the business, and had the right to use it.

The trial of this department of the business and had the right to use it.

The trial of this department of the business quarrel is postponed till Thursday, when the Hon. George C. Cabell. Jr., will appear as counsel for Fentress and W. H. T. Loyall will appear for Fowler.
